To the Voters of the State of Pennsylvania:

The undersigned members of the Twenty-ninth regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers, irrespective of party, recommend to their fellow-citizens, Col. Robert P. Dechert, for the office of auditor general. This department of the state government is not and should not be a political office, and the well-being of the commonwealth demands that it be filled by an honest and capable officer, and so conducted as not to be influenced by any political party. We know Col. Dechert's worth as a soldier, he having enlisted with us in the ranks and won promotion until he reached Brevet Lieutenant Colonel, which position he held with honor and distinction. We also know that he is eminently fitted to discharge the duties belonging to the office; he is honest and capable, and entirely worthy of your support.

Farm and Garden Notes.
Mr. Peter Henderson, of New York state, states in the Gardener's Monthly that he has discovered that mulching roses in pots to force flowers for the holidays, in January last, with common moss, mixed with a good portion of bone dust, say one part bone dust to thirty of moss, has a wonderful effect in bringing forth early roses. In two weeks after the mulch was first applied a change was clearly to be seen, and by the end of May the plants had attained from four to six feet in height, "and though they had bloomed profusely during a period of nearly six months, were in the most robust health and vigor." All other plants on which the mulch had been tried showed "marked benefits." We should be thankful for some reliable information about the pink Water Lily, which it is claimed will grow nowhere else in the neighborhood of Cape Cod. Cannot some of our Boston contemporaries tell us something about it? We have heard a great deal about their exclusiveness but we don't believe it.

In England the plant is in large demand, and agents of English manufacturers have lately been visiting Iowa, Indiana and Missouri for the purpose of buying all that they could obtain. About twenty five years ago this wood was so little appreciated in the Western states that it was cut up with common woods into posts and rails for fencing purposes, and much was thus used. There is but little danger, however, of the supply becoming exhausted, as there are vast forests of it in some of the Southern states. Some horses possess an immense amount of endurance. No doubt many of the hills that horseflesh is heir to are more frequently produced by over-feeding than from an insufficiency of food. An evidence of long-continued service are a pair of horses owned by Joseph Fenstermacher, of Topcon, Berks county, Pa., which have been used in ore teams for eighteen years, and are still serviceable.

An immense quantity of tomatoes and other vegetables has been canned in New Jersey this season. At Campbell's canning establishment, Camden, as many as 300,000 cans of tomatoes and peas were thus put up during the past three months. Two hundred hands were employed to do the work. The demand for these goods is largely from the South.

The hops from Canada are reported this year to be satisfactory. While the yield of wheat is not so heavy as last year, other crops particularly barley, oats, hay, roots and fruit were heavy. The potato crop of Prince Edward Island gives a generous return, and altogether the farmers of the Dominion are better situated pecuniarily than they were a year or two ago.

The hop crop of New York state turns out to be a very superior one, enough not only to supply all over our consumption, but to leave several thousand bales to spare. This is good news. Some years the crop is almost an entire failure, entailing great loss on the cultivators. Cooperstown seems to be about the headquarters of the crop in New York.

The Pacific Rural Life says that thousands of sheep are being sent to the Sandwich Islands and Mexico from California. Shortorns and Jerseys are favorite breeds in that state. In raising horses much progress is now being made, and many of the best animals have been had there within a few years.

No family in China is said to be too poor to keep poultry. About every shanty struts a pert cock and a few hungry hens, with half a peccary existence and never become diseased from over-feeding. During winter they get barely enough food to sustain life.

The late arrival of two American steamers at Revel, Russia, created a decided sensation in that country. Owing to the high rate of charges, grain is said to be imported from this country cheaper than it can be shipped from some of the agricultural districts of Russia to the seaboard.

Owing to the heavy apple crop the shipments of foreign ports this season promise to far exceed those of any former year. The other day a steamer took from Boston 10,673 barrels, one of the largest cargoes of the kind ever shipped from an American port.

Household and Barnyard.
Receipt for Curing Meat.
Notes from the Scientific Farmer.
As the season has arrived when curing meat is in order, we republish as of old, our famous receipt for curing beef, pork, mutton, hams, etc., as follows:
To one gallon of water,
Take 1 1/2 lbs. of salt,
1/2 oz. saltpetre,
1/2 oz. potash.

In this ratio the pickle can be increased to any quantity desired. Let these be boiled together until all the dirt from the sugar rises to the top and is skimmed off. Then throw it into a tub to cool, and when cold, pour it over your beef or pork. The meat must be well covered with pickle, and should not be put down for at least two days after killing, during which time it should be slightly sprinkled with powdered saltpetre, which removes all the surface blood, etc., leaving the meat fresh and clean. Some omit boiling the pickle, and find it to answer well, though the operation of boiling makes the pickle very hot, throwing off the dirt always to be found in salt and sugar. If this receipt is strictly followed, it will require only a single trial to prove its superiority over the common way, or most ways of pickling the meat, and will not need to be abandoned for any other. The meat is unsurpassed for sweetness, delicacy and freshness of color.

*Omit the potash unless you can get the pure article. Druggists usually keep it.
Balky Horses.
As long as we can remember we have read of remedies for balky horses, and they have been pretty much of the same nature, to wit: To examine the harness on one side and then on the other, then jump into the wagon and drive off. Very nice, but try it. Next, take the horse out of the shafts and tie him by a cord to a round until he is giddy, &c. Rather difficult we think to make a horse giddy. Next, to place the hand over the horse's nose and hold it there, preventing him from breathing until he wants to go. Easy to try. Next, take a couple of turns of about twelve around the foreleg just below the knee, tight enough for the horse to feel, and tie in a bowknot. He will at once start, and the string can be removed. Next, take the tail of the horse between the hind legs and tie with a cord to the saddle girth. Next, tie a string around the horse's ear close to his head.

There is another which we know frequently answers, which is to catch up a handful of dirt and forcing it into the mouth of the animal.
But there is still another, the one we have adopted in all cases, and have never yet known it to fail. It is to pass a twine around the lower jaw, and of course below the hump, and it is quickly put over the top of the head, leaving an end of two or three feet, by which to pull at, walking in front of the horse. This will be found to be a remedy in all cases (if properly done).

A New Idea of Hedge Culture.
Germantown Telegraph.
In one of our exchanges we see it stated that the Illinois farmers have discovered a new principle of hedge culture. They need to have discovered something; for, if reports of those who have traveled in the West are worth anything, a good Osage orange hedge is one of the rarest of sights, and this though the Osage orange has been grown for hedges by the hundreds of millions during the past forty years.

The new idea is in regard to trimming. It has been the doctrine to cut and slash on all occasions. The young plant has scarcely made a growth before it is cut back to thicken it; and as soon as it sprouts again it is again cut, and so on it is through life. But with all this cutting back to thicken it would get naked below; and then after all this it had to be "plashed," as it is called, to make that thick below which the previous trimming has failed to do. This plashing is to cut the stem half-way through near the ground, and then push the plant over, and the plant treated in the same way, and pushed over the one already laid down, and so on till the whole hedge is done, leaving each plant lying on the other, like furrow slices in a plowed field. But this was not the result satisfactorily. It is found that the continuous trimming has weakened the plant's hold on life. Many of the heads die, and the mass of dead stuff as it disappears leaves a hole, which is not a hedge, or anything that was designed to be.

So they have now discovered something new; and the novelty is to let the plant grow as it will for three or four years and then "plash" it. They find that the uncut and untrimmed plant is healthier and stronger every way than the plant cut and slashed about in the old way; and from the base below the half-cut part, a mass of strong shoots put up and make their way between the layered heads in a way never dreamed of under the old plan.

But the interest for us in Pennsylvania is that it is not a new plan left to the inventive genius of Illinois to find, but only a Pennsylvania idea, alluded to frequently in the reports of our fruit growers' and horticultural meetings and noticed on several occasions in these columns. We have given it as our opinion that through Pennsylvania has never made much talk about live hedges, as she yet has trees for timber-planting in abundance, she has more good Osage orange hedges than the whole state of Illinois, and we suppose this is because the principle of good hedge culture is better understood. Lancaster, Chester and Columbia counties are full of good hedges, which it would do our Western friends good to see.

The Illinois farmers, though we cannot give them credit for priority of the discovery, will, however, find that they have hit on a good plan in letting their young plants grow, that will for a few years, before allowing the trimming hook to touch them; but they will have to go farther than this, and abandon the plashing system altogether before they will have a real good hedge that it would delight the heart of a good man to see. Instead of cutting half through, our progressive hedges cut entirely off, close to the ground, and the mass of thick, strong, vigorous shoots that push out are moulded into form, and make a good hedge the same year. As already said, the half dead-alive shoots of the laid down part of the plashed hedge generally die in time; but beside this the young growth which pushes up from below the place of bending has to push through the mass of bent branches and are weakened in the struggle.

Beside all this there is the great beauty of a hedge on this plan over the plashed one. If we let the plants grow three or four years before they are plashed they are large, wide apart, without form, and when bent down make a thick, ungainly mass, occupying ground without use or beauty; but when the strong plants are clean cut away, the new growth has every opportunity to develop itself healthfully, and can be kept within any reasonable bounds.

The Murder by an American Speaker.
The Little Rock (Ark.) Gazette of December 5, 1837, gave an account of the murder on the previous day of Major J. J. Anthony by the speaker of the lower house, Col. John Wilson. It appears from the particulars that this murderous outrage took place on the floor of the House while in session, the speaker, in consequence of some offensive remark directed against him by the unfortunate member, having come down from his seat armed with a bowie knife. The member, it is stated, was similarly armed, but the rencontre only lasted for a moments, the latter having been left dead on the floor, and the speaker had one hand nearly cut off and the other severely injured. Wilson was forthwith arrested by the civil authorities and his name stricken from the roll of the House by nearly a unanimous vote. On the 15th of December, 1838, after an examination, he was held to bail in $10,000 to answer the charge, and on May 14, 1838, he was, after trial, found "not guilty of murder, but excusable homicide."
